Large Local Delegation Attend Convention in El Dorado

DISTRICT MEETING Discussion for No. 9 Also Held at the State Convention

Six Hope women appeared on the program of the Arkansas Congress of the Parent-Teacher association Tuesday and Wednesday at El Dorado. They headed a large delegation of local women to the state convention.

The six local speakers were: Mrs. C. S. Lowthorp, Mrs. Dorsey McRae, Mrs. O. A. Graves, Miss Beryl Henry, Miss Martha Jean Winburn, and Mrs. Chester Lester.

Miss Henry, superintendent of Hope Public Schools, spoke Wednesday morning on "Mental Hygiene"; and on the same program appeared Miss Winburn, of Hope High School faculty, in an address, "Understanding the Adolescent Child." Both speeches were among the outstanding events on the convention program, local delegates reported.

M. Hill, of Texarkana, and Miss Henry, of Hope.

Mrs. O. L. Bondenham, past national officer of the American Legion, of El Dorado, made the principal address at the convention luncheon Wednesday noon.

The Wednesday afternoon program was featured by an address from Dr. Carolyn Hodger, of Chicago.

Dairying on Large Scale Discouraged

Southern Farmers Should Enter Business Gradually Experts Declare

CAMDEN—Dairying on a large scale at this time in south Arkansas was discussed by Ed Pickering of the Bureau of Animal Husbandry, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., at the joint meeting of the Camden Rotary and Lions clubs held at the Camden Chamber of Commerce Wednesday.

Many farmers and business men from Ouachita county were present. Mr. Pickering traced the origin of tick eradication work. He encouraged the plan of producing "stocker and feeder" cattle as soon as possible. This would bring immediate cash and would not bankrupt many small dairymen who supply the local needs as farm dairying on a big scale might.

"The tick eradication work in the seven south Arkansas counties is the best in the history of the department," Mr. Pickering said. He said that these seven counties would be declared tick free and the quarantine lifted on January 1.

Next year the work will start in the remaining eight counties of which Ouachita is one. Mr. Pickering said that if good progress is made in these counties in 1932, Arkansas will be declared tick free for the first time in history.

Flood Control Project Halted by Court Suit

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Secretary Hurley has asked the supreme court to decide whether it is necessary to acquire property or flowage rights by purchase or condemnation before the government can carry out the plan adopted by congress to control floods of the Mississippi.

R. Foster Kincaid, Sr., owner of the land in the Bout basin, 45 miles south of Monroe, La., and about 20 miles from a proposed levee, which would be flooded suit in the federal district court for Western Louisiana, to enjoin the government from constructing the levee floodway, which would divert water from the main channel of the river.

He declared such diversion would destroy the value of all his property in the flood area and charged that the government proposed to take his property without just compensation.

Strawberry Acreage To Be Discussed Here

Four Meetings to Create Interest in the Development of This Crop to Be Held in the County Next Week By Expert

Developing strawberries as a new cash crop for this section of the state will be the subject to be discussed at four meetings to be held in the vicinity of Hope next week, by B. J. Nuckols of the American Refrigerator Transit company and also affiliated with the Missouri Pacific Railroad company, with headquarters in Little Rock.

Mr. Nuckols has made several individual trips to Hope within the past few weeks and already a number of farmers and Hope business men are interested in the project of growing strawberries in sufficient amount to justify a cash lot shipment.

The meetings scheduled next week are to be held at Rocky Mount Wednesday, October 21, Shover Springs, October 22, DeAnn, October 23, and will be held at night. They will begin about 7:30. The final meeting will be held at the city hall in this city on Saturday, October 24 and will begin at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

All farmers living in these communities to be visited, are urged to attend these meetings.

Several local firms and business men are interested in the success of these meetings and the planting of a strawberry acreage in this section. Messrs. Seed Store, C. S. Lowthorp and Company, A. D. Middlebrooks and others will be glad to furnish any information to growers before the time for these meetings.

Strawberries in Arkansas Strawberry growers in Arkansas enjoy a number of factors favorable to profitable production and is the surest and most widely adapted fruit crop produced in the state.

The crop ripens at a time when there is little competition from other large producing areas and has been able to win a good reputation on the market. Strawberries in Arkansas will add a dependable pay day to communities where the soil is suitable for producing the crop and can be included in the average farm program with few labor adjustments.

The yield per acre and the market price determine the gross income from all crops, and of these two factors the yield per acre is largely under the producers control. It is even more important to get high acre yields from crops requiring intensive cultural methods than from the simple crops, and the growers who produce strawberries yields well above the average for the state make a substantial profit under the poorest market conditions.

The strawberry acreage in Arkansas has shown a wide variation during the past six years, from a total of 11,500 acres in 1925 to a peak acreage of 21,600 in 1928. A 14,000 acre crop in the state in 1928 produced an average of 55 crates per acre with a gross income of $296.50 per acre. A 20,000 acre crop in 1929 produced an average of 51 crates per acre worth $135.30. The strawberry acreage in Arkansas has been declining since 1928, and it is estimated that there will be only about 9,000 acres in bearing in 1931, and this acreage has very poor stands as a result of the dry weather of 1930.

Growers who set strawberries during this period of low acreage have an opportunity of producing from three to four crops with unusually good market prospects.

'All Greek To Me,' Declares Bealle DAYTONA BEACH, Fla.—(AP)—Walter A. Bealle, held here for Arkansas officers on a charge of murder, said Wednesday "It's all Greek to me."

He did not say whether he would resist extradition for the slaying of George Riola near Little Rock a few weeks ago.

"At first they had it that I was the man that was killed," he said, "but it's all Greek to me. All I know is what was in the telegram they sent the chief of police. They claimed they had found a letter or something that belonged to me."

Liberalization Sought on Drouth Loan Rules WASHINGTON—(AP)—Representatives Sandlin and Wilson of Louisiana Wednesday urged upon President Hoover some liberalization of drouth loan regulations.

They said they had proposed no specific plan, but emphasized that with the prevailing low price of cotton some action was necessary to enable the farmer to withhold his product from market.

The agriculture department, they added, recently announced it would investigate individual cases, and act upon the merits presented.

The representatives expect to confer with Secretary Hyde of the agriculture department.

Three Missing Persons Are Located in Woods LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Three Little Rock persons, a man and two women, who became lost in woods near Bald Knob while hunting Tuesday, were found shortly before noon Wednesday.

Drinking of Solons Flayed by W. C. T. U.

Tennessee Should Elect Women State Leader Asserts

MEMPHIS—(AP)—Drinking members of the Tennessee legislature were rapped Wednesday by Mrs. Minnie Allison Welch of Chattanooga, who told the state W. C. T. U. convention in her president's address there should be a campaign to elect women in their places.

"Where women were not available as candidates she asked the delegates to see they voted for 'men who are respecters of the law, and no matter what the law is, will obey it as long as it is the law.'"

There were "doings" during the recent legislative session, she said, that were a "disgrace to the manhood and citizenship of our state." Some members "volunteered information that they drank," she declared, and while there were legislators who were "true to their oaths of office and gentlemen in every sense of the word," Mrs. Welch regretted to say "they were few and far between."

Joe T. Robinson Commended For President In 1932

Arkansas Senate Adopts Resolution at Session on Thursday

QUARLES OBJECTS

Takes Exception to Word-ing and Criticized Actions of Statesman

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The senate adopted a resolution commending Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas "to the nation's democracy as an honored statesman to lead the militant hosts of democracy at victory in 1932."

The lower house, last week adopted a concurrent resolution without a dissenting vote, which was not acted on by the senate, endorsing governor Roosevelt of New York for the democratic presidential nomination.

The only vote cast against Senator Robinson was a resolution by Senator John M. Quarrels of Helena, Arkansas, who took exception to reference in the resolution to Robinson's "spotless private and public life," declaring that Robinson as a lawyer served large corporations and "a man can not serve two masters."

Quarrels also criticized Robinson's being a member of the defense council of A. B. Banks, financier, whose bank chain collapsed and who was convicted in connection with the failure and sentenced to a year in the penitentiary.

Senator L. L. Mitchell, of Prescott, representing Hempstead and Nevada counties, defended Robinson's record, saying it is a lawyers privilege to defend whomsoever he pleased.

Acreage Control Measure Signed

Effective If States Producing 75 Per Cent of Crop Accpet Plan

LITTLE ROCK—Governor Parnell late Wednesday signed the cotton acreage reduction bill passed last week at the special session of the legislature.

Similar to laws passed by the Texas and Mississippi legislatures, the Arkansas act provides for reduction of cotton acreage in 1932 and 1933 to 30 per cent of the land in cultivation this year.

Like the Texas and Mississippi laws, it would become effective only when states which produce 75 per cent of the American cotton crop in 1930 have adopted similar legislation.

When the joint resolution passed by the legislature urging a conference of legislative committees of Southern states to agree on a uniform cotton acreage reduction bill reached Governor Parnell Wednesday it was found to contain an unexpected provision and the governor postponed signing the measure.

The resolution provides that the next regular session of the legislature shall be asked to pass an appropriation bill providing for the expenses of the joint committee named to attend the conference. A similar resolution by Senator Abington has passed the Senate. It contains no reference to an appropriation and it is likely that the governor will wait to see if the Abington resolution is adopted.

The governor also approved House Joint Resolution No. 1 urging congress to enact legislation to prevent "short selling" on the market, and the resolutions calling for a joint session to hear the governor's message and for a joint committee to confer on the highway audit bill.

Auto Invented To Run Without Gas

Makes 35 Miles an Hour in Tests on the Coast Before Reporters

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Roy J. Meyers, Los Angeles inventor, believes both motor cars and airplanes eventually may use compressed air motors, eliminating the fire hazards and weight of fuel.

The inventor, who has experimented with air devices for two decades, this week demonstrated a car of his own design which achieved a speed of 35 miles an hour on a 150-mile trip from Los Angeles to Bakersfield, Calif.

But much work remains to be done, Meyers said, adding that "I wish I knew myself when it can be put into general use."

A tank with a capacity of 200 pounds air pressure drives the experimental car.

Meyers said the fuel consumption averages about 10 pounds for every 13 miles traveled and leakage of air is but 10 per cent. The only noise is the hiss of air from exhaust valves.

The automobile, demonstrated before newspapermen and the backers of a company formed to finance the invention, has a radial engine with six cylinders mounted on a standard chassis.

By a single throttle, the driver feeds air into the cylinders, forcing the pistons up and down. A device has been developed to recapture the spent air and compress it anew. The fuel tank is heated by a battery, expanding the air.

Meyers' other inventions include a compressed air car brake.

Camden Officers Break Up Game Operated by Little Rock Men

CAMDEN—A gambling ring, alleged to have been operated by two Little Rock men, was broken up on South Main street by Sheriff Arthur Elmes and Deputy Sheriff B. M. Miller. The two Camden negroes were the "outside men" for the syndicate that had been at work here about a week, officers said. The second floor of John Bailey's store on South Main street, was the scene of the games. The room was crowded with negroes when the officers raided it.

It was said that slips of paper with numbers written on them were sold for 10 cents, and these were placed in a cigar box and shuffled. The box, paper pads and other equipment were found in the room. Many white men had bought slips, officers said. The five men are being held in the county jail here awaiting trial.

Danley told a committee Wednesday that Hoffman had offered him $50 to vote for a sine die adjournment of the legislature which was deadlocked over a measure to authorize an investigation of the highway department.

Danley and Permenter of Perry county and Blackwell Wednesday formed the house they were offered bribes.

The house adopted two amendments to the senate audit bill and passed a salary bill appropriating $12,000 out of a fund voted by the regular session to be expended by the Highway Department to advertise the state.

Age of Confusion

THE Episcopal church's house of bishops, remarking in its recent pastoral letter that we are living in a time of extraordinary confusion and strain, will find a whole host of people, church members and otherwise, to add a fervent amen!

Indeed, there are times when it seems as if this confusion were the heaviest of all the loads this post-war generation must carry.

The war did a great many highly damaging things to the world, but nothing was ultimately more dismaying than the way it knocked the old certainties on the head.

In the old days, as at present, depression and hunger and unrest visited us every so often; but no matter what happened we felt that we knew exactly where we were going, and why, and we were always sure that if we hung on tightly things would get better after a while and our troubles would be forgotten.

But today, as the bishops point out, we are extraordinarily confused. The slogans that used to cheer us have lost their magic. We can no longer accept our great men on faith; instead we examine them cynically to see just where and how each one gets his percentage. The old confidence in national destiny has faded; the most forthright patriot wonders, now, and then, if these infamous Russians may not, conceivably, know something that it would be good for us to know too. Having lost our belief in a great many things, we have lost much of our belief in ourselves, and it is bad for us.

That, very likely, is why we are taking this depression so much to heart. Visitors from Europe have wondered why we feel so badly; our depression, they say, is nothing compared to what the British and the Germans are putting up with; but we are more vocal about it than all the European nations put together. The answer probably is that we are feeling the reaction from the high hopes we used to have.

We are, in other words, badly confused about everything. Being badly confused, we can't see through the clouds anywhere. We cannot make ourselves believe that hard times will ever end. We cannot realize that ultimately we shall get back our lost self-confidence. We are paying, perhaps, for the cockiness with which we accept our years of good fortune.

General Butler Quits

WHEN Maj. Gen. Smedley Butler reviewed his marines for the last time at Quantico, Va., the other day, prior to his retirement from the service, his voice broke and he told the leathernecks huskily, "You have given me something to remember the rest of my life."

His emotion is easily understood. He will take many memories with him when he goes to private life. He must be a wrench for an officer to lay aside his uniform after 33 years of service, much of which has been, in the fullest sense of the word, "active" service.

But it works both ways. If the marines have given General Butler a lot to remember, he himself has given the marines plenty to remember, too. His occasional indiscretions may have made some of us forget the fact that he has been an exceptionally useful and gallant officer. The marine corps, caring nothing for his indiscretions, will keep his gallantry in mind for a long, long time.

What the People Don't Know—

IN the handling of the public's business, the attitude of many honest politicians and others supposedly honest, is that "What the people don't know won't hurt them." This statement, however, has not proved to be true. A better version would be, "What the public don't know about their business will keep us out of jail."

The reluctance of some of our officials to permit a complete audit of the highway department demonstrates the general attitude. But that is not all. Laws requiring publication of financial statements by counties, municipalities and improvement districts are ignored. In some states, publications list every expenditure of the public's money, to whom and for what. The Arkansas publisher who advocates adherence to publication laws is accused of promoting his selfish interests. Yet there are many cities and counties which are now unable to pay for such publications, and the chances are that if they had spent more money on publicity in the past, they would not be broke today. The public should insist on complete reports on the handling of its business affairs. Otherwise there will be continued failures.—Harvard Times.

Better Condition on Farms Observed

Texas Commissioner Says Agriculture Soon to Be on Sound Basis

AUSTIN, Tex.—(P)—The campaign of rehabilitation of the cotton farmer and the betterment of agricultural conditions in the south has just started and will end only when agriculture has been placed on a sound operating basis, J. E. McDonald, Texas commissioner of agriculture, said in discussing farm problems.

McDonald asserted the fight was "just started" when the Texas legislature passed the cotton acreage control bill and it was signed by the governor. The law limits cotton acreage in 1932 and 1933 to 30 per cent of the area in cultivation in 1931 and prohibits planting the same acreage to cotton in successive years. It was estimated the law, if observed, would decrease cotton acreage by 50 per cent.

Success of the movement will depend largely on the attitude of the Texas farmers and on action taken by other states to cut down the burdensome cotton surplus, blamed generally with depressing the cotton market and resulting in low prices.

The Texas commissioner of agriculture was extremely optimistic over the effect of the law for which he had fought through two legislative sessions and upon which he based his campaign for his present office. He did not fool himself that enactment of the law would raise the price of cotton immediately, but advocated it as a permanent public policy to rehabilitate both the soil and the farmers.

Public opinion will be the main agency in the enforcement of the law, McDonald said, adding that he believed leading cotton farmers would see to it that the law was respected and observed.

The main problem facing Texas agriculture today as the result of the passage of the law is to utilize to best advantage the land formerly planted to cotton, on which cotton planting will be barred next year. In calling a recent statewide meeting of farmers, bankers and business men to consider his problem, McDonald advocated a co-ordinated state wide program for the utilization of the 70 per cent of the cultivated land that cannot be planted to cotton.

It has been suggested repeatedly by leading agriculturists that much of the land could be used in growing feed crops to be fed to Texas cattle in fattening them for market and in the maintenance of dairy herds.

Further diversification through the growing of truck crops, fruits and poultry raising has been advocated. McDonald urged farmers to "live at home" and grow and can their own meats and vegetables in preference to buying large stocks of groceries.

Better Condition on Farms Observed

Texas Commissioner Says Agriculture Soon to Be on Sound Basis

AUSTIN, Tex.—(P)—The campaign of rehabilitation of the cotton farmer and the betterment of agricultural conditions in the south has just started and will end only when agriculture has been placed on a sound operating basis, J. E. McDonald, Texas commissioner of agriculture, said in discussing farm problems.

McDonald asserted the fight was "just started" when the Texas legislature passed the cotton acreage control bill and it was signed by the governor. The law limits cotton acreage in 1932 and 1933 to 30 per cent of the area in cultivation in 1931 and prohibits planting the same acreage to cotton in successive years. It was estimated the law, if observed, would decrease cotton acreage by 50 per cent.

Success of the movement will depend largely on the attitude of the Texas farmers and on action taken by other states to cut down the burdensome cotton surplus, blamed generally with depressing the cotton market and resulting in low prices.

The Texas commissioner of agriculture was extremely optimistic over the effect of the law for which he had fought through two legislative sessions and upon which he based his campaign for his present office. He did not fool himself that enactment of the law would raise the price of cotton immediately, but advocated it as a permanent public policy to rehabilitate both the soil and the farmers.

Public opinion will be the main agency in the enforcement of the law, McDonald said, adding that he believed leading cotton farmers would see to it that the law was respected and observed.

The main problem facing Texas agriculture today as the result of the passage of the law is to utilize to best advantage the land formerly planted to cotton, on which cotton planting will be barred next year. In calling a recent statewide meeting of farmers, bankers and business men to consider his problem, McDonald advocated a co-ordinated state wide program for the utilization of the 70 per cent of the cultivated land that cannot be planted to cotton.

It has been suggested repeatedly by leading agriculturists that much of the land could be used in growing feed crops to be fed to Texas cattle in fattening them for market and in the maintenance of dairy herds.

Further diversification through the growing of truck crops, fruits and poultry raising has been advocated. McDonald urged farmers to "live at home" and grow and can their own meats and vegetables in preference to buying large stocks of groceries.

Gets Trade Mark From Mustard Jar

Advice of Friend Causes Man to Adopt Well Known Slogan

The original bull trade mark, the modern version of which is again seen in the "Bull" Durham advertisements in newspapers throughout the country, was borrowed from a mustard bottle.

John R. Green, owner of the Durham tobacco factory after the Civil War, was sitting in the local hostelry discussing his growing tobacco business. His friend suggested he adopt a trade mark to protect himself. Pointing to the mustard jar on the table, his friend said: "There is a condiment that, as you see by the label, manufactured in Durham, England. It bears the sign of a Durham bull's neck. Why not name your product Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco and adopt the whole bull as a trade mark?"

This advice, as recorded in Boyd's "The Story of Durham," was followed. A few days later, the sign of the bull was painted on sheet iron and mounted in front of the factory. It was no untill some years later, however, after William T. Blackwell, a pioneer of national advertising, assumed control of the business, that the bull trade mark was depicted all over the country.

The fellow who sold us the 14-karat ring not long ago apparently had dropped the gold standard also.

Would it be rash to say that England had been penny wise and pound foolish?

There's ever one song in the hearts of men
That never to rhyme has rung;
The song of a dream that passed
A life by.
The song that never is sung.
Forever it sounds, like a deep-lowing stream.
Life's unsung song of a fugitive dream.
Full sweet is the song that a poet sings,
And that of the winging bird;
But sweeter by far is that unsung song
Nobody ever has heard.
Too holy it is for common-day speech.
Too lofty for human efforts to reach.
And what is the song that nobody sings?
The child of unfeeling Fate.
Forever to bide under lock and seal
Enthroned in silent estate?
Oh, ever it sings in the souls of men.
The unsung song of the might-have-been.—Selected.

Laying Hens Need Much Green Feed

Cabbage, Collards, Rape, Carrots Recommended by Specialist

To get good production and good hatchability from laying hens they must be supplied with plenty of green feed. Green feeds are high in vitamins which are essential in feeding chickens for production and hatchability of eggs. Green feed helps to supply minerals.

The cereals, such as rye, oats, wheat make the best winter grazing for poultry. Any one of the three mentioned cereals is good, but rye is probably stand the most grazing. However, oats and wheat are cheap this fall and should be used.

Cabbage, collards, rape and carrots are all good vegetables to grow for green feed for poultry.

Where white corn is used in the ration it is essential to supply sufficient green feed to the ration to Knox Jr., Extension poultryman, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

No Agreement On Lower Rail Wages

Executives of Some Roads Hold Time Inauspicious for Cuts

RICHMOND, Va.—(AP)—A lack of necessary unanimity among railway executives has prevented steps towards bringing about a reduction in wages of railway employees, Fairfax Harrison, president of the Southern Railway System, told stockholders at their annual meeting here Friday.

Railway executives have discussed the question of wages, but did not agree, he said, as several contended that the present is not the time to bring on a congressional discussion of the matter.

"The railroads can be operated on a paying basis if given a free hand," Mr. Harrison said. He said that one road, however, cannot initiate wage reduction negotiations, but that such a movement must come from all.

Mr. Harrison said the wage question had been considered for several months by a group of seven executives of whom he was one. He refused to discuss the dividend question, and asked the stockholders to continue to have confidence in their directors. He told the stockholders the company will not earn its fixed charges in 1931.

Truck competition was described by him as a serious menace to the railroads. If the motor trucks were regulated properly by Congress, he said, they would still continue to take a proportion of the rail business, but not to such an extent as now. Mr. Harrison said the Southern Railway has experimented with passenger bus lines, but he did not believe they were profitable to their owners.

Mr. Harrison reported that operating revenues for the eight months ending August 31, 1931, amounted to $67,734,290, or 10.27 per cent under the total for the same period of 1930. Operating expenses were $55,226,736, or 10.80 per cent lower. The operating income for the period dropped to 52.7 per cent or from $11,973,227 to $5,693,541.

Mississippi Wins Praise of Williams

Farm Board Member Lauds Assembly After Bilbo Signs Cotton Law

JACKSON, Miss.—(AP)—Enactment into law Tuesday of cotton acreage curtailment was praised in an address before the Mississippi legislature by Carl Williams, cotton member of the Federal Farm Board.

Mr. Williams' address followed by an hour the singing by Gov. Theodore G. Bilbo of the Robert-Sillers cotton acreage reduction bill which becomes operative when states growing 75 per cent of cotton in the United States enact similar laws. The Mississippi law calls for a reduction of about 50 per cent in acreage to be planted to cotton in 1932 and 1933 and is similar to the Texas and Arkansas plans.

"I congratulate you on the action which you, yourself, have done," said Mr. Williams to the House and Senate in joint session. "I hope that all the Southern states will pass a similar law so that we may have a fair test in the entire belt of reasonable control of production," he said.

Mr. Williams was opposed to prohibition of cotton planting next year, saying that such a step would be disastrous and would be an open invitation to foreign countries to begin raising cotton.

"Helpful as option restriction legislation may prove," said Mr. Williams, "its observance must be agitated by an aroused public will for obedience with the insistence of bankers, merchants and landlords supplying cotton plants that reduction in acreage must be and will be enforced."

Mr. Williams said that the Federal Farm Board would do its part in bringing about observance of the law by educational campaign to be participated in by all agricultural agencies based on a five-point program. He enumerated them as follows:

Reduction acreage insofar as it affects feedstuffs; restoration of soil fertility; improvement in the grade of cotton and a system of co-operative marketing of agricultural products. The board member said that agriculture must hold down the supply until the demand "catches up."

CHAPTER II
Mary moved slowly toward the closed door of Mrs. Jupiter's sitting room and called sharply, experimentally, "Eddie?" Then more loudly, "Eddie!" There was no reply.

A scream broke from her lips and without looking where she was going Mary backed away from the figure on the floor.

It seemed hours before Spence came down, and when he did he seemed to have forgotten that she lived. He seemed surprised that she was still standing in the same spot where he had left her. "Well! What are you standing there for?" he barked at her. "Find the Master! Quick! And Barclay!" He snapped his fingers, and the second man came trotting post-haste. "Go right across the street and fetch Dr. Jordan, and take him up to the mistress' room as fast as you can."

It seemed hours before Spence came down, and when he did he seemed to have forgotten that she lived. He seemed surprised that she was still standing in the same spot where he had left her. "Well! What are you standing there for?" he barked at her. "Find the Master! Quick! And Barclay!" He snapped his fingers, and the second man came trotting post-haste. "Go right across the street and fetch Dr. Jordan, and take him up to the mistress' room as fast as you can."

It was impossible not to obey the old man as he cracked out commands like a drill-sergeant. Mary moved off, but stopped to telephone Eddie. He shared a flat with two or three other young men, and because of them she had never visited him. His telephone number was the only definite link she had with him.

SOMEONE answered, but it was not Eddie. Eddie was not there. Had not been there for three or four days. "I know something is the matter," Mary told him—she was sure he was lying—"but I'm his sister. He called me about half an hour ago. It's very important. Don't you know where he is?"

It was quite hopeless. The boys were as worried as she was. Eddie seemed to have disappeared. The figure of Teddy Doulton lurched into the hallway. Teddy always pretended to be drunker than he was.

"We thought you'd eloped!" he chortled gaily. "Where's Dirk?" His puzzled gaze searched the dark corner in vain. Anything to get rid of him, Mary thought desperately. "Listen, Ted," she said quickly. "Will you do something for me?" He was compliant, but suspicious. "Then go and find your host for me. He may be out in the drive talking to the chauffeurs. Find him and bring him here, quick!"

Teddy saluted elaborately. "I hear and obey." He turned himself around and started off, but suddenly stopped and clapped a hand to his head. "By the way, who is my host?" Then he snapped his fingers. "Ah, I remember. Now don't go away, sweetheart—I'll be right back!"

He moved off, making exaggerated motions of search, lifting cushions, spanking draperies, and inspecting woodwork through a nonexistent magnifying glass. She had not really expected any help from the fool but his silliness seemed more than she could bear. Suddenly she wanted Dirk terribly. He would know what to do. The bathroom was deserted as she crossed it and a babble of voices from the dining room told that supper was being served. Dirk and Cornelia were not there.

She went out on the terrace. Some dark corner would yield them, she felt sure. As she came out on the walk that led to the lower garden, the sound of voices below her arrested her attention. Two figures were away to the right, on the very lip of the hill, the woman's white dress brightly silhouetted against the dark.

"I will! I will, too!" she was sobbing. "Let go of me, you brute!" It was Cornelia, and the man whose bosom she was pounding with her fists as he held her firmly by the shoulders, was Dirk. (To Be Continued)

OUT OUR WAY

Spring Pigs Turn Corn Into Cash

Feed Conditions Warrant Breeding of More Sows in Arkansas

Feed conditions and the small number of hogs in the state warrant the breeding of a greater number of sows and gilts this fall. The abundance of feed other than corn on which brood sows can make the first cost on the pigs lower than it has been for years, much lower than the price for which pigs can be purchased now. Where there is a surplus of corn it can be stored and fed to spring farrowed pigs before much damage from storing will result. By full feeding the pigs can be put on the market at 5 months of age. Further, there will be a strong demand again next year for pigs for the home meat supply. So, while there seems to be enough hogs in the country as a whole, it would seem, under the present feed conditions and the indications for growing feed stuffs again another year in liberal amounts, that hogs on hand next year would be a good source of income as well as a meat supply for Arkansas farms, states M. W. Muldrow, Extension animal husbandman, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

If spring pigs are wanted to use corn next spring the sows should be bred early, not later than the middle of October. This will give pigs farrowed in early February. While this may be earlier than usual, feed conditions will justify more effort in the care of the pigs. Gilts from 1931 spring litters may be grown until the first of December before breeding. Their March litters will then do for the home meat supply in 1932.

It's easy to understand why a fellow with a one-track mind often goes off his trolley, says the office sage. Hard times notwithstanding, 38,000 men were given jobs in sugar factories out west. Sweet are the uses of adversity.

Still, there must be a silver lining to the gold situation.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth. Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat trouble. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)
